

Break the Burnout Cycle

5 Stats That Prove the Power of Better Document Management

With a severe global accountant shortage and an ever-growing amount of client data, increasing expectations and more complex regulations, is there any wonder why the industry is fighting a burnout battle? The only way to get ahead is to have a system that scales and removes some of the admin and busywork, which is why document management has become so critical.

How do you stack up against today's trends?

66%

66% of accounting firms with less than 20 employees know technology significantly reduces the number of hours they spend on each client and each tax return — but less than 1% of them actually use their technology stack to its full potential

46%

46% of accountants in Australia and New Zealand say they don't have enough time to provide value-added advisory services to their clients

45%

45% of accountants in Australia and New Zealand say it takes too much time to track down documents from clients during tax season

USD 14.16 billion

The global document management system market is expected to reach USD 14.16 billion by 2030

Don't fall behind the curve.

Radical increases in efficiency lead to happier accountants and more satisfied clients. Discover how to select and maximize your own document management system in our ebook, Financial File Frustration: A Blueprint for Getting Your Accounting Records Securely Under Control.

